Political Judgment and its Factors

Answer a)

The main factors for rendering and considering a political judgment include personal, cultural, and economic factors. The factors are important because all the factors have a combined effect on the performance of the individual. The political judgment includes decisions that is based on observational assessment from the input groups and influences the group's relative power. The factors contribute in developing the political judgment. The most common factor in the political judgment is the biasness of the leader, which the leader judges the individual. It has been observed that personal factors hold most of the biasness. The political judgment requires one to conduct efficiently observation and one's behavior (Morgan et al, 2011).

Answer b)

A good political judgment requires political cost and feasibility. The political judgment also requires consistent deliberation. The researchers identify effective political judgment as balancing the need of the decision and entailing the quality of the analytics. The decision's quality depends on the domestic support, by obtaining the equal and effective use of the political and time capital. In the term of political judgment, the decision is effective if it delivers the best results to the followers (Wyer et al., 2014). The political judgment is related to the leaders, and hence, should serve with best and effective performance of the leader. The authors state that, in a democracy, the political judgment refers to the personality and profile of the leader who can assess the qualities with good political judgment. As the judgment refers to the concept of evaluation on quality basis, effective judgment refers to the quality of the person who brings the best result in terms of politics.

Answer c)

The factors that can change one's ability to render such political judgments include two main factors of biasness and absolute decisions. The biasness refers to the decision that is unfair and depends on some personal favors. Such biasness in the political judgment can create wrong decision, which can adversely affect the abilities and capabilities of a person. It is important to understand the level of the judgment that is made. It is because the political judgments are made on high-level politics or where the quantity cannot prove the leadership of an individual. Hence, the ability can be changed if the decision is absolute and provide no room for reasonable doubts.

Answer d)

The factors that can prevent one from thinking the wrong direction are negotiations and flexibility. The decision should be communicated and the political judgment is effective if it uses the vote count of maximum people. It is important because every person serves his own thinking patterns and the pattern differs from person to person. The judgment that is subverted can be changed by practicing negotiations of various kinds. One of the most important kinds of negotiation includes communicating the decision and the judgment that is created from one's behavior and capabilities (Srull, 2014). The decision that is made should include flexibility as the judgment can change from the different experiences. Hence, it is important that the judgment possesses high flexibility and the judgment decision should be communicated to other partners or so-workers to create a synthesis of decision.
